

August 8, 2012

As Co-Chairs of the District of Columbia Labor Management Partnership Council (LMPC), we are writing to invite you to attend the first meeting of the LMPC on Wednesday, August 8, 2012, at the John A. Wilson District Building in Room 507A. We look forward to your attendance and participation in this meeting.

Delivering high quality, cost effective service to our residents and visitors to the District of Columbia is a goal that can only be reached if labor and management works together, as partners. We pledge that, through the LMPC, we will work hard to develop and maintain an excellent work environment for all of our employees in the District government, and use this labor management forum to openly address the issues that may be affecting our work environment.

The success of the LMPC depends on the participation of the directors, labor leaders, and employees of the District government. As a leader in your agency or union, we need your support and participation in identifying the labor management issues that affect our work environment. We look forward to your input in offering ideas and solutions that will address these issues and help take the District government to the next level and become one of the most efficiently run cities in America. We hope that you are able to attend this meeting on August 8th and we look forward to working together with you to improve service delivery and enhancing the workplace for our employees.

Sincerely,
